The pearly, poetic landscapes of Co-rot, the sparking Daubignys, the rich wood interiors of Diaz, the Jacques and Schreyers that were collected by the late Mr. Watson, a prominent Pennsyl-vania lawyer, make this sale a reminder of the great picture auctions that oc-curred before the war. Certainly no such Corots have appeared upon the auction block lately, and it goes without the saying that they will be scrutinized closely by the lovers of the Barbizon school. One of the Corots is "Le Soir." a pastoral of pleasing aspect. Beneath a group of wide spreading trees, painted the atmospheric gray greens for ich the painter is celebrated, some peasant women are gossiping at the close of day, while a cow and two goats are ambling along unattended.

In spite of the delicacy with which the foliage and sky effects have been painted the composition "carries" remarkably well, and nothing of the petry of the picture is lost in a distant view of it. "Environs of Arleux" is an-other atmospheric affair giving a glimpse
